One of the developments of the "Chantecler" craze in Europe has been the adaptation of the rooster costume to various uses. In a recent masked ball in a London rink, at which all the guests wore roller skates, the prizes were carried off by a man dressed like Rostand's Chantecler and a woman who was clad to imitate the hen pheasant, the heroine of the French play.

CANNON IS ACCUSED OF DOWNING LONGWORTH

Washington, March 26.—Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of Theodore Roosevelt and representative from the Cincinnati district, was denied a place on the new committee on rules, according to a report, as a result of an objection made by Speaker Cannon. When asked about the matter Mr. Longworth said: "I have no comment to make on it."

Early in the week Representative Tawney of Minnesota made the announcement that Mr. Longworth's name had been placed on the slate which he believed would be adopted by the Republican caucus. In fact Mr. Tawney strongly urged that Mr. Longworth be given this assignment on the ground that, although a regular, he was popular with the insurgents. When the slate was submitted to Speaker Cannon, it is said, Mr. Cannon drew a line through Longworth's name.

Uncle Joe told his lieutenants, so it is reported, that Mr. Longworth had been very free in his criticisms of the speaker, and that he would not consent to Mr. Longworth's advancement to the rules committee.

POULTRY DEALERS TRY TO SHIFT THE BLAME

New York, March 26.—Some 30 of the 38 poultry dealers now under indictment appeared before Justice Goff in the criminal term of the supreme court.

They were members of the New York Live Poultry Commission Merchants' Protective association and the jobbers' association and larger dealers, represented by former District Attorney William Travers Jerome and I. H. Jacobson.

Mr. Jerome scoffed at the story circulated that he had secured the service of a number of experts to put all the blame on Miss Layer Plymouth. "Why, any one can see that this is a joke," explained Mr. Jerome. "Miss Plymouth is the name of a chicken. She is not to be made the goat, I assure you."

While the denial of Mr. Jerome was being given out it is said that experts are at work to prove that all the blame of the poultry trust will be shouldered on the hard laying chick-

MAKING MEAT TENDER

(New York Press.)

Monkeys and parrots are toughest of foods, but, after burying a week, are tender and palatable. Tip finds negroes know much about foods without reading books on cookery and science. Once Tip had a cook, a razor-using negro. Gavage could take the toughest old hen, gander or rooster and make roast to melt in a nap's mouth. Tip finally watched Gavage and found he buried these tough fowls and then roasted them for hours in a slow oven. And that was Gavage's secret.

An old French lady told Tip that the best fowl for soup and fricassee was the biggest, fattest, cheapest old hen in the market. She would hang it out for a week. Besides, she claimed that young pullets had not strong enough savor to live through the long boilings for salads, stews, fricassées and soups. One day she would have soup, next day boiled tender parts like breasts, and the next day fricassee and salads. She rubbed the giblets into a mash—the main flavor of soup. Louisiana créoles cook many kinds of fowls undrawn, and it is nothing less than sin to draw a woodcock.

Stops Lameness

Much of the chronic lameness in horses is due to neglect.

See that your horse is not allowed to go lame. Keep Sloan's Liniment on hand and apply at the first sign of stiffness. It's wonderfully penetrating—goes right to the spot—relieves the soreness—limbers up the joints and makes the muscles elastic and pliant.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. G. T. Roberts of Resaca, Ga., R.F.D. No. 1, Box 43, writes:—"I have used your Liniment on a horse for several years and it has cured me of lameness entirely cured her. I keep it around all the time for galls and small swellings and for everything about the stock."

Sloan's Liniment will kill a spavin, curb or splint, reduce wind puffs and swollen joints, and is a sure and speedy remedy for fistula, sweeney, founder and thrush.

Attention is called to the Dixon lecture to be delivered on the high school lecture course next Tuesday night. In securing talent for the season the committee made special effort to get the very best and to this end they have been fully assured that Mr. Dixon is one of the best orators on the platform today. He has not the fame that some statesmen have, but every one knows that these famous men are not always better lecturers than those of less note. The committee is very anxious that there be a large attendance because they feel that those who attend will hear a splendid lecture. The hour is 8:15. Those who have had confusion on their reserved seats are asked to call at the Y. M. C. A. building and have same exchanged.
